Wooden Bridge

San Pedro Bridge is dubbed as the longest wooden foot bridge in the Philippines which connects to island barangays, Brgy. Cantiasay and Brgy. San Pedro formerly known as Brgy. Hanigad . It is one of the main attractions in Surigao City specifically in Nonoc Island. This old photo that I have shows the longevity and the capacity of the bridge to cope with time. If you want to visit here, you can have four options upon crossing the sea for at least almost an hour from Surigao City via motor boat . You can have your point of transportation from Brgy. Talisay, Brgy. Nonoc and the nearest point are directly in Brgy. Cantiasay and Brgy. San Pedro.

Silop Cave

Silop Cave Complex (SCC) is in Barangay Silop, Surigao City, Surigao del Norte - Of particular interest is Cave 4a which is part of the established 16 other entrances. It is the only water cave in the system where freshwater runs through the cave at an average depth of 5 feet in the dry season. Certain lengths are as deep as 8 feet. Source pool is 20 feet deep or deeper. The cave is estimated to be 1,000 meters long to reach the source pool. As of today, there is no baseline information for which the LGU can use as basis to start protecting the area. Today cave 4A's waters remain an enigma as to its contents, composition and importance to the surrounding forest. Since 2011, the FCD members have spent personal finances to investigate the nature of the SUCS to find out about the value of protecting the area against urbanization.

Pasayan Festival (September 10-11) – pasayan is the local word for shrimp, which is bountiful in the area. The city celebrates this festival through cook-off. ## About Us

I'm Rogie Enot, a passionate entrepreneur with a deep understanding of the construction industry. With a background in business management, I've always been fascinated by the intricate process of building and the importance of quality materials in achieving lasting results. Having worked in the construction sector for 2 years, I've witnessed firsthand the challenges that professionals face in sourcing reliable supplies. This inspired me to create a one-stop solution that simplifies the procurement process and empowers builders to access top-quality materials with ease. My vision for this website is to revolutionize the way construction supplies are sourced and purchased. I envision a platform that not only offers a comprehensive range of products but also provides valuable resources, expert advice, and personalized support to help customers make informed decisions and achieve project success.
